

Zamar – an expert in equine hot and cold therapy for injury – is launching a new machine that makes international performance-level treatment available to all. Patrick Riley explains

In 2009, Zamar attended some of the best competitions in the country, including Badminton and Burghley, and has worked with the UK's top horses, riders, physios and vets. The diary for this season is filling up fast – but as well as looking forward to some fantastic competition, excitement is brewing about the arrival of the long-awaited Easycold system.

What's all the buzz about?

The Easycold system uses all of Zamar's technology to provide a smaller, lighter and more affordable machine. This unit is suitable for use at home or in competitions, is fully FEI compliant and can treat two legs at a time. Its introduction means that there is now a Zamar model for everyone: from top professional stables and veterinary practices, to the weekend competitor and amateur owners, all may now benefit from Zamar treatments.

Since our launch in 2004, customers have reported excellent results with serious tendon/ligament injuries using our machine. Kathryn Nankervis at The Equine Therapy Centre, Hartpury College, used a Zamar to treat a suspensory ligament injury on a resident case; the results were so good that Kathryn is now undergoing research trials on cadaver legs to gather information as to why this treatment is so successful. Look out for further updates.

The results we've had with equine tendons have also been recognised by sports professionals in other fields, such as football, rugby, cricket and tennis, and we have several high-profile players using Zamar Sports Medical units on injuries. Last summer, Chris Wislade joined the team at Zamar as the Director of Sports Medical, bringing with him a wealth of experience in the sports medical field as well as a large number of contacts.
